

Seniors

New hope for stroke patients

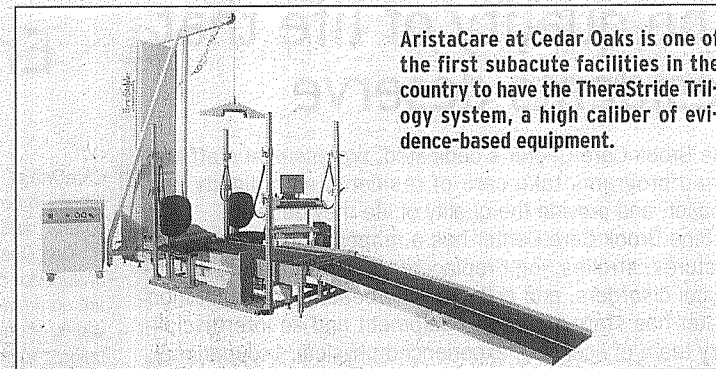

Hope is such a small word but its presence in our lives has a huge impact. For patients recovering from a health crisis, hope can dramatically change lives for the better. It can turn goals into triumphs, and make the seemingly impossible happen. When subacute post-stroke care is needed, there is one stroke rehabilitation program like no other.

From its high-tech, computerized, body weight-supported gait training equipment that re-trains walking, to the cobbled streets of Recovery Lane, a simulated "mini Main Street" where patients learn how to navigate the everyday aspects of their lives, to the state-of-the-art rehab pool, AristaCare at Cedar Oaks is an extreme example of blending the best clinical care and cutting-edge technology to most effectively help patients who suffered a stroke make the most complete recovery possible and return to their lives.

Located in South Plainfield, AristaCare at Cedar Oaks was acquired in 2006 and immediately underwent a major overhaul. The company's goal was to create the ultimate stroke rehabilitation program. The most impressive and results-driven high-tech equipment was purchased, and the highest caliber acute level resources were established, all with the goal of creating the best stroke recovery program available today.

AristaCare at Cedar Oaks is one of the first subacute facilities in the country to have the TheraStride Trilogy system, a high caliber of evidence-based equipment.

In an unprecedented move, AristaCare at Cedar Oaks has received Commission on Accreditation of Rehab Facilities accreditation for both its rehabilitation and its stroke program. It is one of the only subacute facilities in the state to distinguish itself in both areas.

Achieved through a rigorous process, the dual accreditation attests to its standards for quality of care. Accreditation is evidence that AristaCare at Cedar Oaks excels in rehabilitation, efficiency of health-care delivery, fiscal health, and service delivery, creating a strong foundation for quality rehabilitation and care, and consumer satisfaction.

Unlike other nursing homes and hospitals, AristaCare at Cedar Oaks has a remarkable assemblage of equipment that gets patients moving and improving almost as soon as they are brought to the center.

For additional information on any AristaCare facility, including specialized equipment and programs, visit aristacare.com.